On Wednesday night a crowd of New York creative types, including Terry Richardson and Patrick Demarchelier, were privy to a sneak preview of “4 Sale,” a collection of mostly photographic nudes by four Eastern European female artists who were the subject of one another’s photos, a project on which the photographers — Aneta Bartos, Elle Muliarchyk, Yana Toyber and Martynka Wawrzyniak — collaborated for a year. The four-day exhibition, curated by Anne Huntington, opens to the public Friday and runs through 6 p.m. Monday night at 8 Bond Street.
